KalasContemporary is a multifunctional residence with exclusive furnishings and a glass facade, which merges the intimate interior with exceptional views of the wine-growing region. In the centre of the residence is a stunning piece – a grape press from 1837. The object also includes a museum collection of local rural tools and items, a gallery of contemporary art and an art studio. The residence is designed as a unique living unit within an oasis of peace – a green recreation area.

The residence was designed by two Slovenian artists – architect Matevž Granda and designer Aleksander Brezlan. The architectural concept of this modern object preserves the layout and certain typical elements of an old wine-making homestead, yet at the same time defines a new architectural approach in the context of modern living.

The living/working space, which lies in the heart of nature, is ideal for exploring nearby urban areas and rural villages.

Haloze is a region in south-east Slovenia, near the border with Croatia and is one of the remotest rural areas in Slovenia. You can learn about early 20th century Haloze in the literary works of the renowned dr. Vladimir Bračič.

The Štajerska region is the largest wine-making area with over 6379 hectares, 13119 vineyards and 23 million plants.
